Duke University

Historic Hayti Community

- Residential district located in Black Durham known as the “center-economy of black America”
 - Revered as the “Capital of Black Middle Class” and known as the “Black Wall Street”
- The rise of Hayti is attributed to several factors:
 1. Blacks seeking refuge from white terror
 2. Durham’s keystone/anchoring industries
 3. The illusion of racial peace between whites and blacks
 4. Foundational leaders of Hayti
 - Richard B. Fitzgerald; William G. Pearson; John Merrick; Dr. Aaron M. Moore; Charles C. Spaulding, and James E. Shepard

Sources of Social Tension among Black Durmanites

- Louis E. Austin, Founder of The Carolina Times
 - Committed to speaking “The Truth Unbridled”
- Publicized racial inequities in the following areas:
 - Police misconduct and brutality
 - Extrajudicial murders
 - Unjust Impoverishment
 - Equal pay and workers rights
